Condition & Storage

We would like to remind our customers that heat-treated and kiln-dried timber, while effective in preventing the spread of pests and diseases, can still degrade and accumulate mould depending on conditions. It is important to ensure that the timber is stored in a dry, well-ventilated area, and that it is not exposed to moisture or humidity.

While we take all necessary steps to ensure that the timber we provide is of the highest quality, we cannot be held responsible for any degradation or mould growth that may occur as timber is an organic product. We recommend that customers take appropriate precautions when storing and handling timber, including regular inspections for signs of mould or deterioration.

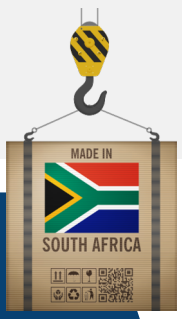

Appearance & Characteristics

Please note that the appearance and characteristics of heat-treated and kiln-dried timber may vary depending on the species and grade of the wood, as well as the specific kiln-drying process used. While we strive to provide accurate and consistent information about our products, we cannot guarantee that every piece of timber will have the exact same appearance or characteristics.

We hope that this disclaimer helps our customers to understand the importance of proper storage and handling of heat-treated and kiln-dried timber, and to take the necessary precautions to ensure the longevity and quality of their products.

Sincerely,
